Jeffrey Sachs is discussing why America can't break free from Israel on Cyrus Jansen's YouTube channel. It's interesting as usual and adjust that it is said Israel will do whatever they want and America has always allowed and supported it doing so and I wonder about biblical prophecy the twist and turns unexpected Outcomes because as far as I know, the United States is not specifically mentioned in the Bible or the book of revelation in particular that's one of the big mysteries of the book of revelation what is America's role and will we be are we the hammer of God or the Devil's anvil. So many Americans seem either ignorant of this question, could care less (bread, circus, and dumped dumbled down), or believe the former and believe in a glorious outcome for themselves and America after an apocalyptic world war.

Like what was done in South Africa against the blacks, and I make it very plain in this book that the apartheid is not based on racism as it wasn't South Africa, but it is based on a desire of a minority of Israelis to acquire land that belongs to the Palestinian and retain the land, and then to exclude the Palestinians from their own property and subjugate them so that they can't arouse and demonstrate their disapproval of being robbed of their own property that's what's happening in the Westbank and the people in this country and America never know about this. They never discuss this. There's no debate about it. There's no criticism of Israel in this country. The basic cause the conflict is sustain occupation of other peoples land by Israel and this is a direct violation of United Nations resolutions it is a direct violation of the international quarters roadmap it is a direct violation of the commitments that leaders of Israel have made in the past at camp David when I was president and in Oslo promising that Israel would withdraw from occupied territories they have Failed"... Another quandary - women are valued so much for appearance that it annoys them because obviously they want to be valued for much more than that - so that makes them grumpy as well as do some of the physicalities they have going on. It's a vicious circle, because the grumpiness makes men indifferent or worse... therefore we have the battle of the sexes. Instead of getting along just fine and dandy it's often a struggle.

There's greedy and there's needy. One reason we only watch channels that reinforce our worldview or mostly watch. Only those is that we don't want to help those we don't like in the ratings, which is understandable, but it prevents us from seeing the other side of the coin.

The fundamentalist Christians in America are largely neocon as are in my estimation, most of the Jewish temples and synagogues. This is a religious war as much as anything else - I mean in the Middle East, especially the protestant evangelical West, the huge Catholic denomination, and the Jewish religion in general. In all cases, the congregations are heavily influenced by their leadership. The churches are trying to bring in the second coming and apparently have some differences with the eastern churches, especially with the Russian one. There's been "friction" for a long time as witnessed by the western crusaders bloody attack on Constantinople over 1000 years ago.

The Crusaders attacked Constantinople during the Fourth Crusade in 1204, an event that marked a significant and controversial chapter in medieval history.

Key Events:

1. First Siege (April 9, 1204):

The Crusaders, who had originally intended to fight Muslims in the Holy Land, were diverted to Constantinople due to political intrigue and financial debts to the Venetians. They launched an initial assault but were repelled by the city's defenders.

2. Second Siege (April 12, 1204):

The Crusaders breached the city's walls and entered Constantinople. After fierce fighting, they captured the city.

3. Sack of Constantinople:

Following their victory, the Crusaders looted and desecrated the city, including its churches and cultural treasures. This event dealt a devastating blow to the Byzantine Empire and strained relations between Western (Catholic) and Eastern (Orthodox) Christianity.

The attack on Constantinople was not part of the Crusaders' original plan but occurred due to complex political and economic factors, including a disputed succession in Byzantium and the Crusaders' debts to Venice, whose fleet they depended on. The sack permanently weakened the Byzantine Empire and is often regarded as one of the major reasons for its eventual fall in 1453.

Einstein said, "I believe in Spinoza's God"

Spinoza's God is the infinite, impersonal substance that is identical with Nature. It is the underlying reality of everything, encompassing all that exists and operates according to necessity and natural laws. God is not a personal, anthropomorphic being but the creative force (Natura naturans) and the totality of existence (Natura naturata). Everything is an expression of God, and nothing exists outside of it.

So the Jews, who shouted, "crucify him, crucify him", were influenced by powerful religious/political establishments. Is the same going on in Israel and America now? Martyr complexes, delusions of grander complexes etc. - we point fingers at each other and make such accusations. Mortally primordially and basically, we tend to put ourselves first, and above others for various reasons like a feeling of moral superiority based on things like; ideology, religion, law, genetics, money, etc.

I take every word of the Bible very seriously if not literally or inerrantly. It has influenced the world for good and perhaps for bad more than any other book I've heard of.

Are we omen programmed to complain? They may have good reasons to, and have shrill voices designed to get people's attention. Otherwise we might take their concerns lightly if at all, and though some of their concerns are extremely important, others tend imo to be frivolous. Men should not be ruled by women, nor women ruled by men but women imo don't seem to mind male rulers as much as men dislike the opposite. Men on the other hand are also "programmed" and the result aren't very pretty.

So if you want to live with the full grown woman, listen to what she says and let it influence you but not guide you inordinately. When they complain, let it roll off your back like water off a duck if you can't do that forget the whole dang shooting match.

If you let them, women will rule you as they like an orderly world. They despise weakness and when discovered take advantage of it to take the reins. According to the old saying, "you go to war with the army you have", and the ladies weapons are mostly unique to them.

In Ancient times some people would throw their unwanted babies off cliffs. This might be seen as antiquities version of Planned Parenthood because they didn't really know how to "safely abort" babies. Nowadays there's a billion dollar organization that provides abortions on demand under the guise of "women's health" services. They may sell body parts of aborted babies, as alleged by an undercover investigation by Veritas. Today many celebrate the ancient Romans, who were one of the societies that practiced infanticide...

"It was not an accident that I got a job on Wall Street once I got it and they started paying me huge sums of money to give financial advice when I really shouldn't have been doing it. It was briefly intoxicating to think that I had value. Once I started figuring out how it worked I built on the side as a writer, if you truly understanding something before you write about it you can explain it. I do have an advantage in that I worked in the place long enough and had to grapple with fairly complicated financial concepts and I know how much BS there is and how often people even in the financial world think they have kind of understand something that they don't so I'm not shy about pushing people until I feel like I've got a proper explanation. In American ambition in Hollywood or Silicon Valley or Washington or Wall Street there's an annoying thing about people. They don't want to seem like they don't know, they think that if they don't know they're going to seem stupid and that leads to a greater stupidity problem... on Wall Street it isn't that people are looking to do bad things, people would rather do good things if they could... but they're looking to make money, we live in a society where the elites maybe more than they've ever have the greatest wealth than they've had a very long time but not that much of obligation to us as a society. There's a natural tendency for people to tell the story of their lives, of their success, forgetting all the accident that was involved, all the help they got all the gratitude they should feel"... Michael Lewis

They're trying their hand at it and they'll use it for the rest of their lives and when they become grandmas, they will be running things too. Beauty and sexuality are not exactly fleeting, but neither are they permanent... I don't know if grandmas are happy or sad when those tools have mostly lost her effectiveness (It probably varies individually), but by then they've probably inherited the “family fortune” - good for them maybe... and maybe not so good for men but that's how it goes, although the pendulum swings and has since time imMEMORIAL... finding a reasonable balance point - is it “the trick”,

Can everyone's economy grow? If you own the reserve currency, you have an advantage over other countries which advanced encouraged and increased immigration, which intern increased demand for housing services and economic growth. If you were a world power with an outstanding military, you could use that as a last resort to keep things “moving.” In ancient times it was almost pure pillage, in ours it might result in mercantile/colonialism, proxy wars and if all else fails to boots on the ground. In any case when the economy tanked and millions were out of work, empires could put that “excess labor”, to work in the trenches. The result was usually plunder and riches at another countries expense, and perhaps a labor shortage if the war was very difficult... I suppose the cycle repeated itself and still does.

"According to Oxfam International's recent report, "Takers Not Makers," the wealth of the world's ten richest men grew on average by almost $100 million a day in 2024. Collectively, billionaire wealth increased by $2 trillion that year, a rate three times faster than the previous year. This surge has led to the creation of 204 new billionaires, averaging nearly four per week, bringing the total number to 2,769 with a combined wealth of $15 trillion.

Oxfam's analysis indicates that 60% of billionaire wealth is now derived from inheritance, monopoly power, or crony connections. The organization warns that if current trends continue, the world could see at least five trillionaires within the next decade. Despite this immense wealth accumulation, the number of people living in poverty has remained largely unchanged since 1990, with approximately 3.5 billion individuals still living on less than $6.85 a day.

Oxfam emphasizes that this growing concentration of wealth is facilitated by a monopolistic concentration of power, with billionaires increasingly exerting influence over industries and public opinion. The organization calls for governments to implement measures to reduce inequality, such as taxing the richest individuals, dismantling monopolies, and ensuring fair wages for workers"... chatGPT

Robin said they were discussing differences between men and women at Bible study. It reminded me of the old one about men in primitive societies were hunters. They have to be quiet and be on the lookout for game. Women in hunter gatherer societies might mostly be gathering or making things which are more conversational situations. Got to the farm and saw footprints all over the deep snow, but fortunately none of them are human

To Airbnb listing cut your dogs toenails be vaccinated

Got something on my hands from wearing those nitrile gloves when I was staining the floor must be that I turned them inside out somewhere along the line.

Stopped to clean them at the Gatesville Road/Sweetwater trail stop sign. If somebody comes behind me, they might honk or maybe chase me, what's happened once before . That was a guy named Ken Hunter who for all I know "might not be a jerk", but was that day. Hunter turned left in front of me and I honked because it was abrupt and dangerous on his part. He didn't like it so he and his son turned and followed us to Flanders. Tyler and I were pulling to drop off a check for Susan . Hunter yelled, "I hate drivers like you!", from his truck I said, "have a good day", and walked past him to drop off the check. Tyler had gotten out of my Cherokee, as back up I think and had an exchange with Hunter's son, who reportedly had been in prison.

The younger Hunter said something to Tyler like, "are you still here?", to which Tyler gestured his displeasure.

I don't think they are neighborly people or at least not that day.

After he turned dangerously in front of me, I noticed a second later that there was somebody tailgating him and somebody tailgating the car that was tailgating him. I guessing he was made nervous and maybe that's why he did the dangerous turn.

The fact "" that he turned around, followed me and got mad tells me something about his character and it's not something good.

So I'm putting him and his son on the list of assholes I've had run-ins over the years which would also include Tommy Kimbrough, Sal Errante and Tim Bardes. Some involved flights others didn't. Sometimes wish I could summon the anger and hatred they seemed to have towards me then I could really defend myself fight but... there's probably usually a better way... trust me and I'll trust you, treat me well, I'll treat you well. Why were they so hateful and why was I targeted? Did they perceive me as white and privileged, or as weak and vulnerable? I am white, but an outsider - certainly the only Egyptian American in my class. Being very white was like being a fly on the wall, able to hear the nasty things people would say about Arabs because I didn't look the part... nor did I look "just like them." It was six grade when Billy said "you have a funny nose". Mona probably heard something like that even earlier... and it would've been "devastating" to a young girl. That's not to say I suffered greatly, we just had lack of an extended family and an odd combination of; ethnic, physical and religious peculiarities that set us apart from our classmates, some many of whom faced adversities of their own.

% Which most of us survived .

Don't see a big difference between people calling themselves, master race, or shows and chosen people although I do see there's a distinction because you can call yourself a master race and be wrong but if you call yourself the chosen people and are right, then you are special... Depending on who chose you that is.

On the tube, we've watched the first episode of Severance. I thought it was pretty good but Robin found it slow. She likes something more action packed... but not violent or containing foul language - she has suggested ditching Netflix for the Angel network.

I keep thinking I'm seeing turtles crossing the road but it's January 12. Turns out they're chunks of snow that have fallen off cars. Like turtles they come in all sizes.

Just ate some pita bread leftover from FlapJack's, but I don't want to get bread belly so I looked for another snack in my car. I packed cucumbers, which don't sound that appetizing but when I open the container I realize and remember the little green apple that I had packed as well.

Reminds me of the song, God didn't make little green apples it don't rain in Indianapolis in the summertime", and as far as bread belly, I've already got that going on.

Got off the phone with Robin five minutes ago to fill her in on the days events, which ha ha ha included; staining the floor to cover, dog scratches, quading through the woods in the snow and almost getting my cheap jeep aka Cherokee stuck in the snow.

In a few minutes, I'll call Mona. Her power has been on and off for two or three days, which is a major inconvenience to somebody like her with vision problems. We also talk about Ramsey and his family and that their house burnt down in Malibu terrible tragedy... Fortunately, thank God they had evacuated and were safe. They took their cars with them Teslas mostly.

The little green apple I added to my lunch box was very good and I can't complain about the cucumbers either. They're the little "Persian ones"... I think that's what they're called.

I had an ice pack in the freezer for the ride home and had to lift my shirt completely so it would be directly against my skin. It's a cloth one so it actually felt quite good...Ice is a great pain medicine!

At this point in life, I have back pain, a pain in the neck, pain in the shoulder and this month pain in the knee. But I don't have enough ice packs for the drive home. I only have one, so I have to decide. Should I use it on a sore joint or on leftover cucumber slices and apple slices...what's more important?

Been dawdling on 135 north going about 50 to 55 miles an hour and a pick up truck approaches. It reminds me that with the speed limit of 55 I should be doing more like 60 to 65 but he keeps a respectable distance as I speed up to 62.

Mona sounded very weak. I am worried about her. She said she'd call back. We talked for 10 or 15 minutes. She said she has "the thing where you can't talk", I said is it laryngitis she said didn't think so?

She asked what I thought about Tommy putting the register thing on Amazon things they need since their house burned down and they're left with very little. I said I thought it sounded strange as did she. She thinks he wants to sell his Ford lightning in a hurry.

She said on the one hand she thinks they have tons of money but then she also when I said I hope he's not overextended. She said oh yes, I think he is. Kayla just beeped in. I will call her back now.

The child has asked politely for a spanking, begged for a spanking and maybe's demanding a spanking but to no avail. That's OK - if he doesn't get one I think hopefully they'll succeed anyway he's a good little feller... and they're good

A couple weeks ago I watched a painful example of the effectiveness of “time outs.” The toddler was sent aka banished to the bathroom for one minute. He spent that time screaming and slamming the door His mother had to hold the door closed and threatened him with another minute of time out which he incurred, during which time he repeated the screaming and slamming of the door. timeout has its place, but I'm not sure it's affective discipline for this child and this situation.

I think a child who is not disciplined effectively is likely to meet real discipline in the real world someday and feel they're being badly wronged, leading perhaps to trauma or further misbehavior and potentially criminality. Might it be better to learn that there's a real world, where there are real consequences, and peeps should avoid doing things that incur them?

Behind every Christian or inside every Christian is a human and I think that human trumps the Christian darn near every time... doesn't matter if your mother Teresa or who knows who. That doesn't mean it's not worth becoming a Christian...I believe it is.

Sometimes the YouTube algorithm and I agree. I'm watching Jesse Ventura lay a beat down on the monsters running and ruining our lives. Youtube's gonna make me wait 30 seconds to watch it, which is too long so I hit the back button, then hit the play button again and it's five seconds so YouTube is agreeing with me 30 seconds is way too long for this video and too long for for practically any video.

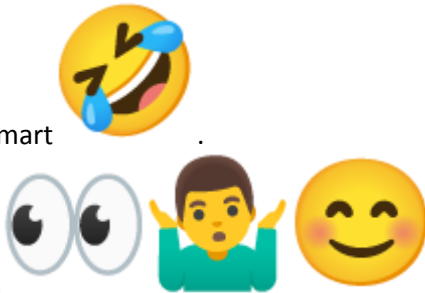

I didn't watch the whole Jesse Ventura video, but the first line said there should not be one billionaire in America and I agree with him. It's obscene bullshit that Elon Musk is worth $400 billion which is equivalent to the wealth of 400,000 millionaires. Billionaires are ruining our lives just to make theirs easier, lazier, more decadent... and advance their own agendas and worldviews.

How do should you tell a parent who doesn't believe in corporal punishment that it can be an active act of love. You might be teaching the child moderation instead of access excess and that should follow eludicate them through life.

There are children being raised who are purposely not being told what the word spanking even means which is a shame because it would be better to get a few minor ones when you're little then major ones when you're older.

You knew it's meaning and were only lightly spanked a couple or a few times. and your case that's all it took to encourage good behavior. I don't think you were traumatized by it. The rightful intent of corporal punishment is to encourage could good behavior through its careful and moderate application... it should not be administered severely. A spanking's not terrorism, traumatization or cruelty - it's a measured form of tough love.

Not sure the US needs to, or should return people to their country of origin, when it may be more humane to return them to Mexico, which allowed them to cross our border. keep saying a YouTube teaser that says "Who is Satan in Islam?/Iblis explained"... it's 19 minutes long so I won't watch it, but I looked it up:

"Iblis" is a figure in Islamic theology, often understood as the equivalent of Satan or the devil. According to the Quran, Iblis was a jinn who refused to bow to Adam when commanded by Allah, due to his pride and belief in his superiority—claiming he was made of fire while Adam was made of clay.

Because of his disobedience, Iblis was cast out of heaven, but he requested and was granted the ability to tempt and mislead humans until the Day of Judgment. His role is often interpreted as a test for human beings—to resist his whispers (waswasa) and stay on the path of righteousness.

What was Netanyahu's original original name?

"Benjamin Netanyahu was born Binyamin Netanyahu on October 21, 1949, in Tel Aviv, Israel. His original name was actually Binyamin Mileikowsky. His father, Benzion Netanyahu, was born Benzion Mileikowsky in Poland and later changed the family name to Netanyahu, which means "God has given" in Hebrew. The change was part of a broader trend among early Zionist immigrants to adopt Hebrew surnames.

Do everything in its power So, in short:

Original family name: Mileikowsky

Hebrewized name: Netanyahu"... chatGPT

"Benzion Netanyahu, originally born Benzion Mileikowsky in 1910 in Warsaw, Poland, immigrated with his family to Mandatory Palestine in 1920. Upon settling there, the family Hebraized their surname to "Netanyahu," which means "God has given" in Hebrew.

This name change was part of a broader trend among Zionist immigrants who adopted Hebrew names to reflect their new identity and commitment to the Jewish homeland.

Which Israeli Prime Ministers had their names changed to sound more Hebrew or Middle Eastern?

"Several Israeli Prime Ministers Hebraized their names to reflect the Zionist ideal of reconnecting with Hebrew language and culture. This was a common practice, especially among early leaders. Here are a few notable examples:

1. David Ben-Gurion • Original name: David Grün (or Gruen) • Changed to: Ben-Gurion ("son of a lion cub" or "son of strength") • Why: Adopted a strong Hebrew name as part of his Zionist identity; he was the primary founder of the State of Israel and its first Prime Minister.
2. Golda Meir • Original name: Golda Mabovitch (later Meyerson in the U.S.) • Changed to: Meir ("illuminates" in Hebrew) • Why: She Hebraized her name when she moved to Palestine and became involved in Zionist leadership.
3. Levi Eshkol • Original name: Levi Shkolnik • Changed to: Eshkol ("cluster," usually of grapes) • Why: Chose a more Hebrew-sounding name during the pre-state period, in line with Zionist ideals.
4. Yitzhak Shamir • Original name: Icchak Jazernicki (born in Belarus) • Changed to: Shamir (a mythical hard stone that could cut anything) • Why: Adopted a militant, strong-sounding Hebrew name during his underground activity against the British.
5. Moshe Sharett • Original name: Moshe Shertok • Changed to: Sharett (a simplified Hebrew form of his original name) • Why: To better reflect a Hebrew identity, especially as Israel's first Foreign Minister and second

Prime Minister.

6. Ehud Barak

- Original name: Ehud Brog
- Changed to: Barak ("lightning")
- Why: Hebraized it during military service, a common practice among IDF officers.

If you're curious about more recent leaders or lesser-known stories behind these name changes, I can dig into those too"... chatGPT

Were the founders of modern Israel atheists ?

"Many of the key founders and early leaders of modern Israel were secular or non-religious, and some identified as atheists or agnostics—though their views varied widely. Here's a breakdown of some major figures and their religious outlooks:

1. David Ben-Gurion • Role: Primary founder, first Prime Minister • Beliefs: Deeply secular, but had a strong sense of Jewish identity rooted in history and culture.

- Religion: Not religious; some consider him agnostic. However, he respected Jewish tradition and made compromises with religious parties (e.g., Sabbath observance, kosher laws in government institutions).

2. Theodor Herzl

- Role: Founder of modern political Zionism

• Beliefs: Secular Jew; distanced from Jewish religious practices. • Religion: Effectively atheist or agnostic. Saw Judaism more as a national identity than a faith.

3. Chaim Weizmann • Role: First President of Israel, scientist, Zionist leader

- Beliefs: Secular, but not openly anti-religious.

- Religion: Culturally Jewish, not observant.

4. Golda Meir

- Role: Prime Minister (1969–1974)

- Beliefs: Secular; she once said, "I believe in the Jewish people, and the Jewish people believe in God."

- Religion: Not religious herself.

5. Moshe Dayan, Yitzhak Rabin, Shimon Peres, etc.

- All were secular leaders, often describing themselves as traditional or cultural Jews, but they did not live religious lives or express belief in God.

In Summary:

- Many founders were secular Zionists, shaped by socialist and nationalist ideals more than religious doctrine.

- Some were atheists or agnostics, others cultural Jews who saw Judaism as a people or civilization rather than a faith.

- Despite this, Judaism as a religion still played a role in the public sphere due to compromises made with religious parties to maintain political unity.

Saw a teaser on "thealiencontact", channel that said "Pleiadian prophecy revealed: blue star Kachina Niniru & the (coming) Ascension (Affect)... he said it has something to do with the Hopi Indian tribe:

Pleiadian prophecy refers to messages and predictions attributed to the Pleiadians, a group of advanced extraterrestrial beings from the Pleiades star cluster, according to various channeled sources. These prophecies often revolve around themes of spiritual awakening, human evolution, and Earth's transition into a higher state of consciousness.

Key Themes in Pleiadian

Prophecy:1. Earth's Ascension – Many Pleiadian teachings suggest that Earth is undergoing a vibrational shift, moving from a dense, fear-based reality to a more enlightened and harmonious one.

2. DNA Activation – Some prophecies claim that humans will experience genetic upgrades, allowing for higher consciousness and spiritual abilities.

3. Disclosure & Contact – They often predict a future where extraterrestrial beings will openly interact with humanity, helping guide us toward a more peaceful existence 4. Collapse of Old Systems – Many prophecies speak of economic, political, and societal transformations, as old, corrupt structures give way to more transparent and ethical ways of living.

5. Return to Unity Consciousness – A major theme is the idea that humanity will move beyond division and ego-based conflicts, returning to a collective awareness of love and interconnectedness.

These prophecies are channeled by individuals who claim to receive telepathic messages from the Pleiadians, such as Barbara Marciniak, Christine Day, and others. While some view them as visionary guidance, others see them as metaphors or speculative spiritual teachings rather than literal predictions.

How do; seeds, sun, dirt and water make crunchy apples 🍏 🗑️.

Let's ask the new religion aka AI:

"Love this question — super simple and deep at the same time! So here's how seeds, sun, dirt, and water team up to make those juicy, crunchy apples:

1. Seeds: The apple seed contains all the genetic instructions to grow into an apple tree. Once planted, it starts sprouting roots and a tiny stem.

2. Dirt (Soil): The soil holds nutrients and minerals that the roots absorb to help the tree grow. It also provides stability for the roots to anchor.

3. Water: Water dissolves those nutrients in the soil and carries them up through the roots to every part of the tree. It also fills up the cells in the apples — making them firm, juicy, and crunchy instead of soft or dry.

4. Sun: Through photosynthesis, the tree's leaves turn sunlight into sugars and energy. Those sugars travel down to the fruit, giving apples their sweetness and helping them grow bigger.

So together, seeds give the blueprint, dirt and water feed the tree, and sun powers the whole system — all working to create that perfect, crunchy apple. Cool, right? "The Shasu were Semitic-speaking pastoral nomads who inhabited the Southern Levant from the Late Bronze Age to the Early Iron Age. They were organized into clans led by tribal chieftains and were often described as brigands active from the Jezreel Valley to Ashkelon, as well as in the Transjordan and Sinai regions. Some Shasu also served as mercenaries in Asiatic and Egyptian armies.

Egyptian texts from the 18th Dynasty (circa 1550–1295 BCE) frequently mention the Shasu, depicting them as nomadic groups in wall reliefs and monuments. Notably, inscriptions from the reigns of Pharaohs Amenhotep III and Seti I refer to the "land of the Shasu of Yahweh," suggesting an early association between the Shasu and the deity Yahweh. This has led some scholars to propose a connection between the Shasu and the early Israelites, though this theory remains a subject of debate.

The term "Shasu" itself is derived from the Egyptian word "šꜣsw," which refers to nomadic or Bedouin people, primarily those of Syria-Palestine. While they were often portrayed as adversaries of settled Egyptian society, the Shasu's interactions with neighboring civilizations were complex, involving both conflict and cooperation"... chatGPT

Women tend to be besieged by men, it's been that way since time immemorial. It's been that way because for a species to survive, at least one sex has to crave the reproductive act, even not caring or understanding the consequences of that act. It's generally the male although when hormones rage, it can also be the woman. Having been impregnated, the woman must use the "tool box" and whatever "army she has", to ensure the survival of her children and herself. Men have historically derided women's efforts to survive and thrive because our nature, biological imperatives, instincts etc. are different than women's. You're both doing a very good job parenting and I applaud you, but it's a tough business. If you want my opinion on to discuss anything, from finance to child-rearing or anything in between please feel free to engage... if not I understand 🙏.

Finance - diversify and take with a grain of salt the advice of those who say "you have time to make up for losses." Invest in at least $200,000 of low-cost term life insurance for each of you.

Child rearing - you're doing a great job but you might consider introducing the words, "pancake turner." You may never have to use it, and if you do, maybe only be a time or two, after which the mere mention might do the trick... it's worked before.

Health and diet; consider a simpler more Zen like diet and especially reduce caloric intake. Leverage your willpower, and become satiated not by chewing 100 times, just don't be the first one to clean your plate, and try to forgoe seconds. Find a "free" food that you can eat all you want of (carrots, celery, cucumbers, etc.. Your joints and body will benefit.

Getting into puzzling for the first time in my life, and as I do the dishes, I notice similarities. When puzzling you put pieces together after finding ones that fit next to them, when washing dishes you have to decide how best to stack or nest things in the drainer and there is a difference. Are we even capable of doing things purely altruistic? Or is everything we do traceable back to us looking out for ourselves? pure altruism by definition could mean doing things for others best interest. It requires that we think long and hard about the long term repercussions of things like welfare. Even more pervasive is doing things for other people because we think it will bring us a reward.

"The quote often attributed to Napoleon Bonaparte is:

"All women are whores. We are only haggling over the price."

However, there is no solid historical evidence that he actually said this. The sentiment is similar to one often linked to George Bernard Shaw, who reportedly said something along the lines of:

"Madam, we've already established what you are, now we are merely haggling over the price."

This was supposedly in response to a woman who claimed she wouldn't sleep with a man for a small sum but might for a large one. The phrase has been misattributed to various historical figures over time.

Many Americans want to send immigrants back to where they came from and in some cases it has a religious basis. They may not like; Muslims, Hindus, Buddhist etc, but if we can't get along with other religions we're in trouble. Separation of church and state is mostly implied, as per:

First Amendment (1791): The U.S. Constitution's Establishment Clause states, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

Thomas Jefferson's Letter to the Danbury Baptists (1802): Jefferson described the First Amendment as building a "wall of separation between Church & State."

Perhaps apparently religion's more powerful an instinct and force than the aforementioned man made control mechanisms. Would wording about a mile high steel wall between government and religion, dissuade zealots from imposing religious tests in government? Would an iron dome protect peeps who peacefully practice their religion from demagogues intent on their religion controlling our foreign and domestic affairs?

Listening to Green Day American idiot where he says don't want to be something about, "the alien" nation, but to me it sounded like he was saying Arian nation so I'm going to run with that. That's what we are because the United States was mostly founded by "Anglo-Saxons", who were mostly dramatic descended from various northern European and Germanic people. If I'm not mistaken weren't the Angles and the Saxons, germanic tribes, that colonized the British Isles along with Vikings; supplanting, and mixing with the "native"; Celts, Welsh, Irish and Scotts? Add to that a little Roman blood and whose nose knows what else and you get the English of 1066, were were defeated by Normans who were also also descended from Germanic tribes, Scandinavians and Franks, who I think we're also largely Germanic in origin. These English/Germanic/Northern European aka Aryan? people are the ones who mostly subdued the indigenous people of North America. What is indigenous or native anyway but a population that may have replaced an earlier population, so in an ideal world who has Title or the best claim on land territory and property? You might say it would be the original inhabitants, if they exist - or their descendants who might be interbred with invaders, but this isn't a perfect world so keep your powder dry if you want to keep your grass green.

"For better or for worse"... sadly nowadays many would say for worse.

Others watch or scan headlines and teasers on dozens of channels. You don't have to listen to a whole show to know what they're going to discuss and probably even what their opinion will be. By comparing diverse perspectives, you get a more balanced view.

In my case there are 20 or 30 channels "fairly", evenly distributed between the left the right and the sensible middle. The ladder of which is the smallest because there aren't that many of them.

Goodwill, cheap disposable clothes for cleaning

No rinse cleaner for coils. Return tile

Of course, everything that is being proposed will mostly help the billionaires. Around the world, including the war, pig families of Europe and their finance years. And Wall Street and Rebbe and Tel Aviv and what George Washington said is as true as ever. There's also the protestant Catholic and orthodox divides not to mention is long. And the war, pig families of Europe exist in the United States as they have from the beginning

As I rinse the Jacuzzi mat and Tub, I realize there is no reason to hurry because what they're saying on Bloomberg has all been said before I've heard John Farrow parrot the same lines over and over and the same goes to the three Alexanders

Meanwhile, I look at my bread belly in the mirror and think I've got to do something about it but that sure was a good oyster poor boy yesterday in Defuniak Springs

The only filter I want is in my coffee maker

Is Trump a benevolent despot or a horrible person? Time will tell.

Saw YouTube commercial this morning for Salt that would work better than Viagra. Of course they had a beautiful young woman giving the infomercial goes to show what makes the world go round and always has.

And are the tenths of thousands of government employees getting laid off just relatives of their bosses or hard-working Americans?

His data is presented and disgusted and analyzed on Bloomberg. It occurs to me that they've been doing this for 1000 years and somewhere somewhere in the universe forever.

As I rub the body lotion provided by the condo into the hard callus on my big toe it also benefits my right thumb, which I guess gets a lot of use and is suffering a similar fate

Reinforces the idea that I should learn to use my left-hand more and I guess my left foot except for that fused toe which complicates things

I tried to open the two exhaust fans one is caulked. The other is stuck. I can force them, but there might be a reason they are how they are.

Also wondering how I could've lost the hammer in this condo they're just a few places it could hide I think I open the vitamin bottle and a homocystine and Coke. You can fall out several other things due to, but I'm taking far less than I used to just arbitrarily. I take a D apparently it's important

Robin is hard at work on steady MD. I need to send some emails and drum up some biz.

And for the third time the hole in my pants gets stuck on the kitchen drawer handle. But overall, the handles are great idea cutting down on delamination

I don't know who's more biased, Bloomberg news or Fox News one is INS. The other is Christian is.

The most I can say about the dollar store pliers is it's better than fingers alone

Outcome the channel locks

The missing hammer showed up a day later and as usual, it was hiding under something else

And in this condo there aren't too many places to hide

Funny how eyebrow hair grows more on one day of the week and little the rest, but that day keeps changing.

I'm trying to groom myself better using my dad as an example. He was fastidious and looked dapper, even though he was colorblind he would get close that matched with the help of employees.

Approaching the office of the condo, I think I see a light is that the light at the end of the tunnel at least they're open

It pays to learn from people who've been doing a job for a long time, but don't believe everything they say they're also salesman for themselves or the boss

Bloomberg is brazen. They want to rule the world and they think that we're so dumb that even when they announce things like not just what you should be thinking or saying it's what you should be thinking about they will take it for granted and apparently a lot of people do.

On the other hand, are there some people that want to be managed like cattle? You can do some of the people some of the time with Brett and Circus and some of them all the time with Bread & Circus.

Looking for gloves since I'm working on metal ducts... as usual I can't find them going back to dad being dapper I don't recall seeing him with his shirt hanging out. I'll have to start emulating that too.

Yes, I make my way to the car and then to Lowe's while Robin is at Pickleball. I think to myself I'm not into that just like I'm not into golf and I'm not fishing, but I'm in the fish on a plate.

I want to do puzzling because I hear it's good for your brains but 500 pieces is a lot. They need starter puzzles like 100 pieces so far all I've seen is 500 or six designed for a three-year-old. I'm a little more advanced than that.

An IQ test is logically going to be biased in the favor of whoever made it, although there could be honest ones, but even honest ones are honestly biased and somebody born and raised in a remote part of the world is going to score differently than somebody from a high Texas society, if that's who designed the test and vice versa... anyway an inquiring mind might be more important.

And I do think the high-tech version is more accurate because we are human beings who do things like calculate innovate and create technology, and those in the remote primitive areas in general will have a slightly lower IQ, as evidenced by the fact that they have not created technology beyond the Stone Age

Not was standing that some of their people will have genius IQs by any standard

People always remember the worst about us unless they're infatuated with us and then they don't remember any of that. Of course I've never had to contend with that situation

Not to mention infatuation doesn't last for long usually ooit lang geleden, misschien na het zien of horen van de film Deepthroat, ik weet niet zeker of ik het heb gezien of niet. Eigenlijk las of hoorde ik dat als sperma achter in de keel wordt doorgeslikt, de persoon die het doorslikt nauwelijks proeft, wat logisch is omdat de smaakpapillen voor in de mond zitten, maar ik vraag me af of sommige mensen het echt als een traktatie beschouwen, hè?

% A girl named LA was so good it almost killed me... 🤪.

Came in from the balcony, to take a nap inside, even though we overlook the pool, the scenery today was unspectacular☐

I should probably wait before I record all this stuff and then if an hour or two later, it's still makes sense I should record it problem is I forget it after five minutes

As I get older, I find it more necessary to give my hand a hand a.k.a. my left hand, helps my right hand and vice versa, like team lifts, and team toolsqueezes

Sometimes it surprises me how much we learn from one thing that helps us do something that seems unrelated a little bit better

When you're experienced or nothing and everything's a steep learning curve

But eventually, that learning pays off across-the-board

We have four more days here in Florida. I open a drawer and look for the cleanest, dirty shirt, but it has holes under its armpit so I go to number two. I might make another puzzling video be this time and the title will be. Puzzle me this... Maybe

This will be our last long bike ride and it's fine with me. I probably wouldn't do this if I was by myself too lazy with Robin I will.

Fix Kayla's gate and do a check on child molesters to show them

She's talking about what Easter clothes to buy them. I'm wondering if I can pull further chocolate Easter bunny women are such nursery. We are marauders by nature.

If I need labor, ask Esther;

I said we about 10 times already on this bike ride just saw another lady on the balcony. Her legs were crossed. I just kind of wonder. I'd like to see how those things work.

A helicopter flies loudly overhead and their other sites, but I've seen them all before seen the elephants seen the pyramid Eiffel Tower, World Trade Center. I will keep my eyes on the path.

I don't have the genetics to get big muscles, but with the little effort, I can get bigger muscles. Same applies to people who want to learn and get smarter.

Brothers doing genealogy work about the Lafayette walkers pretty impressive. We're driving through Tennessee just entered the state and saw the sign that said the volunteer stayed. Unfortunately, they were mostly volunteering for war.

Be a good, bad or indifferent

As I drive along, there are endless distractions and irritations. They seem to be strategically timed so that I can't eat my whopper without dropping half of it on my lap or recording a text that I'd like to.

You are naturally more thoughtful than I am. Should I get points for going out of my way to try to be more thoughtful or should I just do it and not expect the points probably the latter but I'd like the former.

Cason point for both of the previous points when I'm listening to the radio and driving and you're asleep I have to constantly adjust the volume because irritatingly the stations are at different levels so I should be thoughtful, but it also requires a learning curve for how to do it without spending all day trying to do it

And that the scam function on the Lexus radio sucks

I'm getting back to the thoughtfulness issue what about with other drivers? Well that's different than with your beloved with the drivers you only have to do with the law requires.

Of course driving would be easier and they tell us safer if we all adapted autonomous driving and intelligent highways but if that is anything like the AI that we have today, I'd say it's not ready for prime time

And a lot of people wouldn't want that abridgment of their freedom anyway, I think better censor technology and better safety systems, breaking, etc. would be better

Meanwhile, above the sun, the highway vultures circle, but it's probably just for roadkill I hope

My heart jumps as I press, cruise control and it flies into top speed. I wonder who sang Jesus Jesus, Jesus, avert heart attack, or is it a placebo

Meanwhile, the Denali, Audi Kia, and everybody else drives crazy. At least they seem to to me and as far as Jesus being more than a placebo and all the other good things they say about them well why not?

Pull into the right lane after passing the Werner truck so the Honda Accord cheap Cherokee, etc. etc. tailgating can pass. I'm sure they have somewhere very important to go.

And I'm guessing that these people would not be very happy with an intelligent highway that does the driving for you so what would that do to road rage would they have to stay in their cars or with override? Could they "get you

As I brush off the 3 ton AC Delco trolley jack it becomes a parent that it would like very much to fall on my toes even the wind is helping it if that's possible

And then the heavy boards that I'll use to support the jack as we attempt to lift the barn at Possum Lodge, try the same old tricks on me apparently as humans are not very popular within Adam and objects despite all our fancy talk no matter who we are

Amongst other things, the boards and the wind have colluded to blow the dust that I'm trying to get off them back into the Salt Creek barn. And that's already a very dusty place

I shouldn't be too surprised, and I don't blame them because their victories are a few and far between. I knocked the dust off with the Foxtel and they didn't get me this time but when they do get us, it can be really bad.

Then I realize they did get me as my back begins to spasm

Hi Rob, I wrap the copper cable one extra time around the nails to secure the barn door because they're a thieving bastards here and it looked like it might've been entered when I got here today

I just heard blitzkrieg bop by Green Day. I liked it next on my desk is blowing in the wind by Bob Dylan. I hit next song because we're not because it's overrated. It certainly not overplayed but yes, maybe it is overrated.

I think I just passed the hairpin turn at Ford Road and why is it that every time I come to a blind curve there's somebody coming in the other direction and it's usually something big

But don't feel too bad, Bobby. I just skipped an Eric Clapton song too

I landed on blue sky by the Allman Brothers. Haven't heard that in a long time.

It's five minutes and 10 seconds long. I lasted too.

Three songs later, I settled on boogie with Stu, the Led Zeppelin version

Then I skip Springsteen's Born In the U.S.A. for born to be bad by George Thorogood

Either I have bad taster on Buck in the system

Doing things wrong is my way of doing things right he sang

Then I skip three versions of Born In the U.S.A. to listen to Boulevard of broken dreams by Green Day

Get to Trafalgar and pass the speedway we're gas is 329 this morning at Casey's. I paid 288. Looks like it's still that price there. The world isn't coming to an end quite yet.

It's the song that I first was introduced to 1st to 11 by. And Audra Miller

I'm walking down the line that divide me somewhere in my mind. He says he sings.

Brain stew comes on next. I'm not digging it.

Bring it on home by Led Zeppelin gets a nod

If there's a bell curve for Christians and some will say there isn't, you've got to be all in and you've also got the satisfy particular list usually their own denominations but anyway I'm more to the left of a curve which I think does exist

So I have an inquiring mind and I ask questions and you're allowed to do that but only if you accept the route answers you are given

So at the moment I'm thinking about female sexuality and a YouTube video by a woman that said size does matter and I always thought it did so that dovetails with my theory that they are a completely different animal than us. I use the word animal respectfully and I really mean creation.

And I guess actually we're both animals sexual animals were at least sexual beings and yes, I think we probably evolved not necessarily the way the scientist proposed today because that's always in flux, but I think there was some evolution involved even if we were seated or influenced by extraterrestrial which I'm not supposed to propose if I call myself a Christian

The next song on the box is broken down angel by Nazareth, which I think sums up what I just said maybe And the lady on Bloomberg being interviewed by Kylie Lyons, who used to be in the Albright group says that ending USAID will mean the children will die well what's happening in Gaza? I guess that's OK to her. Although she of course, will say it's not OK and that our soft power would solve all those problems as long as we can bomb if we have to. And we will, unless they accept transit and trams that, etc.

The lady being interviewed was Wendy Sherman in my opinion and notorious neocon

On YouTube foster the children all the other kids with their pumped up kicks I think that goes along with this too

It seems to me, Wendy, Sherman, Madeleine Albright, and Victoria. Newland would agree with this song or at least with shooting people. Being necessary for our security

All the other kids with their pumped up kicks better run better run faster than my bullet or my bomb their bombs for that matter

And Kaylee Lyons, as usual, comes across in my opinion as an ultimate fellow traveler, maybe she's not like that in real life, but she's paying well. That's Bloomberg's Kaylee lines

So the Bloomberg gang mostly ladies is discussing the call between Trump and Putin and I wonder if Europe will come to Ukraine's age if the United States backs out

There is one guy on the panel, but he's woke as a honeybee and one of the ladies said that most Americans want A to continue to Ukraine, but I wonder if that's true

Then Bloomberg panel, which includes one man whose woke is a honeybee say that Ukraine if it doesn't get a from the US make edit from Europe and I wonder if that's enough or if Russia would destroy Europe with nuclear weapons and then enter the Middle East where it may be badly injured as my America, which, as far as I know, doesn't show up in the book of revelation

And America may not be mentioned at all in the Bible, but China is and do they go into the Middle East to mop up only to be mopped up themselves?

They may not be officially mentioned, but there are 200 million man army from the east points in their direction After all, there aren't enough Chinese women for the men to marry because of earlier policies for one child

And the Chinese chose boys

March 19 met Mike from 317 and Plumber,,, he said to call the office he's been in our house. He said it was kind of rough when they put the panel in.

Hey Siri, I think that Trump will gradually blow up the economy

I just hope he doesn't blow up the world

That and his crazy counterparts around the world

I hope you prevail, but most of all I hope we don't unconditionally. We have to surrender to anyone.

We've killed a lot of people, and we are not beloved by many

Many of my friends and loved ones appear to be like frogs in loop warm water who will boil if they don't jump out of the pot

They will be able to buy hard assets when the time comes, but not much with what dollars are worth at that time

I hope I'm wrong about all this

But when I saw the deep sake video deep, fake video this morning of Barron Trump singing the Jesus, I love you song with daddy playing the piano and all of the comments thinking it was real. I think that we are a gullible bunch.

If you're on the dole , maybe you should get half a vote

The end

The Trump letter gives Iran two months to make a nuclear deal. Ann Marie Hordern says it's a Carrot b and stick approach, their guest is Mike Pyle from Blackrock. Hordern'd colleagues on Bloomberg Surveillance are Jonathan Farro and Lisa a problem with Abramowitz they look like cartoon characters, especially pharaoh Farro, but I can't quite place him.

"Religion was always the best way of controlling and influencing people. " how do you stop yourself from become prey,,, you stop acting like pray.

Everybody assesses everybody they do it intuitively... project how you want them to feel how you sit, how you stand, something as simple as just my posture, my voice, my tone means something...New York City did a study was done put up cameras years ago and they started recording people walking. They took the footage and they played it to convicted felons in prison. They said to them who would you pick as prey? They all picked the same people to prey on just by their walk. There are three types of walking down one walk was I'm walking. I'm sloppy. I'm not paying attention - target. my walk is small and timid - easy pray. You know who they didn't pick it was when the walk wasn't too sloppy big? too small deliberate. on the control of my body. I'm looking around, I'm in control of my body, I'm commanding myself, I'm paying attention, i'm in charge of my space"...

Every girl is basically a grandma and every grandpa's basically a dude... maybe that's why young folks "let", old folks run the world. Most of Id folks have gained a measure of wisdom and experience, but they abuse it because they are as human as children... they're also living on; borrowed time, weak flesh and faltering minds.

My those are sweet little things - well at first

Vis-à-vis politics of the day I am not holy wholly in either camp.

Most of what "they", say makes sense but once in a while, they say something that makes me scratch my head and think, "don't want to be told what to do by these folks."

How many countries have affirmative action for whites, and how many have affirmative action for blacks? Even in countries where whites are the minority.

You might counter with, "whites were colonizers", and I would counter with yes but some peeps would be in the Stone Age without colonization.

We can get along if we stop telling each other what to do all the time 😊.

Calm down, slow down, turn that frown upside down

There seems to be a lag between Trump's dismantlement of DEI and the advertising industry. I keep hearing this boys and girls club of America commercial wear black and other minority children are going to be patrolling our neighborhood planning our retirement doing this and the other thing which is fine, but it's over the top, but I guess it came along a little before Trump's election.

But I doubt Hill counter with a bunch of white kids, saying the same things of course they would be criticized

Touch base with Susan Flesher

It's interesting how many accidents leave to new discoveries and inventions and hopefully those accidents are benign anyway

Don't be so efficient, nor be inefficient 😊

The people that I want to discuss religion with our interested at the ones that are not interested

Trump policies will help the upper class, the rich and especially the Uber rich - they might also help the very poor, but I doubt it and they will most certainly hurt the middle class or what's left of it... they will endure even more negative effects of trickle down economics while the Uber rich are unaffected in America and in Europe. So hopefully the middle-class will come to their senses and throw the bombs burns out - all of them, on both sides of the aisle.

Just like market well and mine it like hell sounds cruel and extreme, but isn't I would say clawback 99.9% give them a parachute and send them home along with their fellow travelers .. don't know if that's a lot of people but it's a lot of money

I will continue to advise my friends and loved ones to diversify and not listen to the hucksters. I hope they do.

Cryonics is criticized do you want to live forever? They mockingly say and they probably do and they expect to or hope to and heaven, but I wonder what about a heart transplant that's rather extraordinary and what about a brain transplant that's kind of like biotics on steroids.

Meanwhile, on Bloomberg, they're talking about what names are most exposed of the legacy auto makers and what are the earning reports going to tell us next week

I'll try this again because Siri said something went wrong. Please try again.

One report says it within days after the end of the cease-fire with Hamas the Israelis have killed hundreds of people, including 200 children

And there a report that Amas did not rape women and kill babies on October 7, and then in fact, Israel may have killed some of its own people because of the Samson thing

They're also reports that the Israelis, rape men and women in their prisons often with objects, but the truth is the first casualty of war, so I don't know if I should believe any of the reports on either side or or at least not take them with the huge grain of salt

I do, however, believe that our media is occupied and telling us lies. As is theirs

Watching David Bowie Suffragette City live 1972 on Mr. Sussexx YouTube channel and I think about that line wham Bam thank you man it's realism reality but what does the suffragette feminist think when she hears that she may be angered disillusion appalled but upon reflection she or at least some women would say unfortunately or otherwise that's reality

Dovetailing was slow down turn that frown upside down and if things are six of 1/2 dozen of the other, don't fret over them this morning I'm thinking do I need to take that last bit of garbage out? And I think about my loved ones and friends possibly being boiled like frogs in a pot Visa be the stock market.

I'm thinking of the old adage that bankruptcy happens gradually and then all at once was it Mark Twain

Visa the Sons of light and the sons of darkness and that we cross back-and-forth over those borders we also I'm guessing Ken do so at any time in our life and make things better and make the world better. Of course the borderline is somewhat to find what side we're on.

Siri was mixed up again and due to her convoluted reasoning, I forget what I really really wanted to say But as I park at Walmart and walk past the chubby cart collector, who's watching his phone seen him here for years I do remember what I came here for fishing tackle and Granny Smith apples

Saw YouTube teaser the other day that said Americans exaggerate how often they go to church since it's 9 o'clock and all these people are scurrying into Walmart. I figure they might be on that list. I suppose I belong there too. But I don't think I claim less I mean more

There may be rational logical reasons for the commandment that man not let his seed fall on the ground The Lincoln SUV was tailgating me. Maybe I'm imagining it, but I think Apple is making their AI stupider for customers like us who bought our phones 3, 4 or five years ago. Punctuation, capitalization, and other very basic things are getting worse all the time. they probably have some explanation like blah blah blah but I'm not buying it. They're just assholes.

I don't think it's paranoid to say that Apple is slowing down things and letting things drop off for longtime existing customers in favor of buyers of new phones. I think it's probably a purposeful strategy.

They might be fined $1 million for doing it but they'd make 100 million for doing it too

The lamb of God well, he must be the light
And he saw the saints worship the great I am
Crying worthy, worthy is the lamb
I want to go to that city he saw
New Jerusalem
Jerusalem
I want to walk your streets that are golden
And I want to run where the angels have trod
Jerusalem
I want to rest on the banks of your river
